One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscribers, living in Somerset county, state of Maryland, on the 26th of December last, two Negro Men; George and Randel—George is about six feet high, twenty-two years of age, and of a yellow complexion—had on when he went away a dark cloth coat, kersey breeches and white yarn stockings; he is a pretty good player on the fiddle.—Randel is about five feet two inches high, twenty years of age, and of a yellow complexion, has a loud hoarse voice, and is a good deal bow-legged; he pretends to be something of a cobbler;—had on when he went away, a fustian coat, home-made kersey breeches and white yarn stockings. There is no doubt, but they will change their clothes as well as their names—they having been taken up on the 29th of December last at Duck-creek, in the state of Delaware, and committed by John Cole, Esq. (by the names of Stephen and Charles) to the care of John M'Wherts and Thomas Kerker, from whom they made their escape.——Whoever apprehends the above negroes, and has them secured in jail, so that the subscribers may get them again, shall receive the above reward, or fifty dollars for either.

WILL BE SOLD,

By Public Auction,

At the Merchants' Coffee House, on Wednesday the 17th inst. at 7 o'clock in the evening

Seven contiguous Lots of Ground.

Six whereof contain 28 and one 30 feet, on the south side of Chesnut street, being bounded on the west by Tenth street, and extending in depth from Chesnut to George street, 235 feet.

On one of these lots there are two Frame Houses, which rent for about £ 35 per annum; and on another there is a good Brick Building, of two stories, which with the adjoining garden rents for 200 dollars per annum. There are on the premises a great variety of fruit and ornamented trees.

The situation of these Lots in a very elevated and improving part of the city, renders them an object highly worthy of the attention of those who are desirous of building.

The terms of payment will be one fourth cash, one fourth in 60, one fourth in 90, and one fourth in 120 days.

Sales at Auction.

On Saturday the 20th April, at 2 o'clock P. M. on the premises,

Sundry Building and Garden Lots,

Some of them contigious to, and others at a small distance from the city, containing from about one quarter of an acre to about four acres each. The small lots front on Vine and Callowhill Streets, near Schuylkill—the large lots front on the south side of Francis Street, on the east side of Schuylkill river, on the west side of Schuylkill, second street, and on intermediate streets—the whole containing about 140 acres, being part of the tract known by the name of Springettsbury.

The situation of many of the lots is on high ground, commanding views of the Schuylkill, and supposed to be so much detached from the built parts of the city, as to be out of danger in case of an unhappy return of the fever.

Maps shewing the division of the ground, may be seen at the Coffee-house, at Ogden's tavern in Chesnut street, at Sybert's tavern in the Nothern Liberties, and at the Middle and Upper Ferries on Schuylkill.

The abundance of stone, for building, on part of the ground, will prove very advantageous to purchasers, as it is proposed to sell at the same time those large quarries on the east side of the Schuylkill, near and above the bridge.

The terms will be cash for the lots of 49 1-2 and 50 feet front, and for those of a larger size one half cash immediately, and the other half to be paid in six months from the day of sale.

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the Subscriber, on Tuesday the second of this inst. April, living in Kent county, Maryland, near Chester Town, the following described Negroes, viz. William, about 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high, a yellowish complexioned fellow, about thirty years of age, formerly the property of doctor William Matthews, he has been very much given to running away, and has been so often described in the public papers within this twelve months that any further description of him seems needless.—Jacob, about 6 feet high, and about 32 years of age, of a common Negroe complexion, down look, his little finger of his left hand stands straight, occasioned by the cut of a sickle. Patt, the wife of said Jacob, about 27 years of age, a small light made woman of a yellowish complection, with thick lips for an American of her stature, she is a very good needle woman, and spins on either small or great wheel, and is very handy in any common house work.—Two children of the said Jacob's and Patt's, the one a male child about four years old, the other a female child about two years old. The above described Negroes took with them, besides their own wearing apparel, three coats, two of which were linsey cloth of a light grey color, both new; one of the two was a great deal too large for either of the said fellows; the other coat of brown cloth, half worn; three under jackets, one a velvet, another a drab, the other a light colored linsey cloth do, one new pair of Calf skin shoes, lined with linnen and bound with leather, one pair of boots remarkably large in the lege, several pairs of stockings and a silver watch, all stolen: their own wearing apparel as follows—William had on a light-horse regimental coat worked with silver twist, (which coat he had when he was brought home to me the first of February last, a round sailor jacket (blue,) thickset breeches, patched with corduroy in the stride, with other necessary clothing. Jacob, two linsey cloth coatees, lead colored, one new the other half worn, blue linsey cloth jacket, half worn, two pairs of linsey cloth trowsers, of a lead colour, the one new the other half worn, tolerable good shoes and stockings. Patt has every day cloathing, and her children wore home-made linen and linsey, her other cloathing not so well known; it is uncertain which course they may take, as William is such an experienced coaster.

Any person or persons apprehending said negroes or sounding them, so that their master may get them again, shall be entitled to the above reward, or in proportion for either of them, that is to say, 40 dollars for each of the fellows, and twenty dollars for the wench and children, and if brought home, all reasonable charges paid by

PHILADELPHIA,

SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 13.

MR. PITT's SPEECH, ON THE UNION WITH IRELAND.

CONCLUDED.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
JANUARY 31, 1799.

Non ego nec Teucros Italos parere jubebo,
Nec mihi regna peto, paribus se legibus ambæ
Invectæ gentes æterna in fœdera mittant.

That is the true principle which I hope we shall equally bear in mind, and which I hope will lay aside all mistaken notions of national pride, and induce us both to support that cause which hitherto too much labour has been employed to oppose and obstruct. I have stated the general motives for the measure, but there are two other objections of which I must take notice—there is a general notion that this measure will occasion the evil of a great number of absentees from Ireland. I think that this is a disadvantage that will be more than supplied in other respects, and indeed much more than counterbalanced, by the increase of wealth, which might take place in Ireland by the introduction of British Capital; which will improve the commerce and the agriculture of the whole kingdom, and give to the inhabitants a turn for industry, which lead to that quietness which the country wants. It will give to the people of Ireland an improved example of society where the highest and the lowest will be identified in interest for the safety of the community; an example of an uniform gradation of life without a chasm in the whole society; the whole being a series of interests depending upon each other for the safety of the whole. I think that this will more than counterbalance the disadvantage of absentees—besides, although the parliament should remove from Dublin, yet Dublin will continue to be the seat of education; it will have the same commerce, and in some respects its commerce will be improved; it will also be the seat of justice, where will be discussed all the questions concerning property, which will be the more numerous as the nature of the property will alter by the introduction of so much capital in trade; so that the very respectable body of the bar will find their business increased instead of being diminished. Nor will the seat of the imperial parliament be out of the reach of him who is fired with the ambition of signalizing his talents in the service of his country in the Senate: therefore I say, when additional wealth, additional security and the other advantages are taken into consideration; the scale will preponderate very much in favour of the Union. Let those who doubt this look at Scotland—look at the metropolis of that country.—What has been the result of the Union there:—an Union, give me leave to say, as much opposed, (and by much the same arguments, prejudices and misconceptions, by creating the same alarm, and, for a time, producing the same effects, as have appeared in this case) I say as much opposed as this has been the case here. What was the result? Edinburgh had, as Dublin will have, its trade, its seat of education, its courts of justice. Edinburgh has, since that period, doubled its population. Well, but Edinburgh had advantages peculiar to itself. Why then let us see how the matter stood in another part of Scotland: at Glasgow, for instance, here the population has increased in the proportion of five or six to one: I say there is no ground for apprehending that the case will not be the same in Ireland. There remains but one more general argument, and that is, that the loss of their parliament will be the loss of the protection to their commerce; to which I answer, that that conjecture is mainly improbable; that at present they have the greatest advantages they possess, not from their own parliament, but from the mere discretion of the parliament of this country; and that that which has been granted them in that condition, and separate from us, is not likely to be taken away from them when we become united; that it has never been the policy or character of the British legislature to treat its united friends with any narrowness of policy; and that the north of Britain, although it has only 45 members in this house, and we are 513, has never found its interests neglected; there are those indeed who assert it has more than its due share of favour—I do believe that allegations of that kind are exaggerations, and that the legislature has attended alike to all parts of the British empire: but be that as it may, there is nothing more clear than that the Union has produced the greatest of all political blessings to Scotland, as I contend it will to Ireland; and that this measure will be seen in that light if the clouds of prejudice are dismissed. Another ground of alarm is, that when Ireland is united to us, it will be made subject to the debt of Great Britain, and that it will draw upon her all our alledged difficulties and supposed necessities. It is not the policy of this country to ask for Union upon pecuniary motives. Have we done so with regard to Scotland?—Has any jealousy existed that Scotland was ever made to bear more than its due share of the public burdens, when we consider the share it has of the advantages of the connection? In truth, our taxation, like all the other practical effects of our constitution, is founded upon the principles of justice. But, in the event of parliament agreeing to this measure, I should propose that, for a given number of years, the scale of taxation for Ireland should be so fixed as not to exceed any reasonable bounds to be agreed upon by both parliaments; and that at no time should Ireland be taxed beyond the proportion at which we should find it necessary to tax ourselves. The details are not now to be considered, but if I have succeeded in showing that the general policy of the measure is good, the house will agree with me it will be proper that the measure should be recorded, and presented to the parliament of Ireland, and left with them to judge whether they are such as they will assent to. I think they are necessary for the peace and happiness of the people of Ireland in particular, as well as conducive to the general welfare of the empire. I shall not enter into any particular detail now, unless some gentlemen should before it. However, to avoid objections, I will read, as part of my speech, the substance of what I mean to move by way of resolutions—the which, if the house should agree to, I should propose laying at the foot of the throne, to be presented to the parliament of Ireland when they are more likely than at present to meet the general concurrence there;—indeed that this should be left to the wisdom of his Majesty, whose parental solicitude for the welfare of his dominions will induce his majesty to present it in due season. Upon these grounds I shall propose the following resolutions:

I. That in order to promote and secure the essential interest of Great Britain and Ireland, and to consolidate the strength, power, and resources of the British empire, it will be advisable to concur in such measures as may best tend to unite the TWO KINGDOMS of Great Britain and Ireland, into ONE KINGDOM, in such manner, and on such terms and conditions as may be established by acts of the RESPECTIVE PARLIAMENTS of his majesty's said kingdoms.

II. That it appears to this committee that it would be fit to propose, as the first article, to serve as a basis of the said union, That the said kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland shall, upon a day to be agreed upon, be united into one kingdom, by the name of The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

III. That for the same purpose it appears also to this committee that it would be fit to propose, That the succession to the monarchy and the imperial crown of the said united kingdom shall continue limited and settled in the same manner as the imperial crown of the said kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland now stands limited according to the existing laws, and to the terms of the union between England and Scotland.

IV. That for the same purpose it appears also to this committee that it would be fit to propose, That the said united kingdom be represented in one and the same parliament, to be stiled, The Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; and that such a number of lords spiritual and temporal, and such a number of members of the house of commons, as shall be hereafter agreed upon by acts of the respective parliaments as aforesaid, shall sit and vote in the said parliament on the part of Ireland, and shall be summoned, chosen, and returned in such manner as shall be fixed by act of parliament of Ireland previous to the said union; and that every member hereafter to sit and vote in the said parliament of the United Kingdom, shall, until the said parliament shall otherwise provide, take and subscribe the same oath, and make the same declarations as are by law required to be taken, subscribed, and made by the members of the parliament of Great Britain and Ireland.

V. That for the same purpose it appears also to this committee that it would be fit to propose, that the churches of England and Ireland, and the doctrine, worship, discipline and government thereof, shall be preserved as now by law established.

VI. That for the same purpose, it appears also to this committee that it would be fit to propose, That his majesty's subjects in Ireland, shall at all times hereafter be entitled to the same privileges, and be on the same footing in respect to trade and navigation in all ports and places belonging to Great Britain, and in all cases with respect to which treaties shall be made by his majesty, his heirs, or successors, with any foreign power, or his majesty's subjects in Great Britain. That no duty shall be imposed on the import or export between Great Britain and Ireland of any articles now duty free, and that on other articles there shall be established, for a time to be limited, such a moderate rate of equal duties, as shall, previous to the union, be agreed upon and improved by the respective parliaments: subject after the expiration of such limited time, to be diminished equally with respect to both kingdoms; but in no case to be increased: That all articles which may at any time hereafter be imported into Great Britain from foreign parts, shall be importable through either kingdom into the other, subject to the like duties and regulations as if the same were imported directly from foreign parts. That where any articles, the growth, produce, or manufacture of either kingdom, or subject to any internal duty in one kingdom, such countervailing duties (over and above any duties or import to be fixed as aforesaid) shall be imposed as shall be necessary to prevent any inequality in that respect. And that all other matters of trade and commerce, other than the foregoing, and that such others as may before the union be specially agreed upon for the due encouragement of the agriculture and manufactures of the respective kingdoms, shall remain to be regulated from time to time by the united Parliament.

VII. That for the like purpose it would be fit to propose, That the charge arising from the payment of the interest, or sinking fund, for the reduction of the principal of the debt incurred in either kingdom before the Union, shall continue to be separately defrayed by Great Britain and Ireland respectively; that for a number of years to be limited, the future ordinary expences of the United Kingdom in peace or war, shall be defrayed by Great Britain and Ireland, jointly, according to such proportions as shall be established by the respective parliaments previous to the union; and that after the expiration of the time so limited, the proportion shall not be liable to be varied, except according to such rules and principles as shall be in like manner agreed upon previous to the Union.

VIII. That for the like purpose, it would be fit to propose. That all laws in force, at the time of the union, and all the courts of civil or ecclesiastical jurisdictions within the respective kingdoms, shall remain as now by law established within the same, subject only to such alterations or regulations from time to time, as circumstances may appear to the Parliament of the United Kingdom to require.

That the foregoing resolutions be laid before his majesty, with an humble address, assuring his majesty that we have proceeded with the utmost attention to the consideration of the important objects recommended to us in his majesty's gracious message.

That we entertain a firm persuasion that a complete and entire Union between Great Britain and Ireland, founded on equal and liberal principles—on the similarity of laws, constitution, and government, and a sense of mutual interests and affections, by promoting the security, wealth, and commerce of their respective kingdoms, and by allaying the distractions which have unhappily prevailed in Ireland, must afford fresh means of opposing at all times an effectual resistance to the destructive projects of our foreign and domestic enemies, and must tend to confirm and augment the stability, power, and resources of the empire.

Impressed with these considerations, we feel it our duty, humbly to lay before his majesty such propositions as appear to us best calculated to form the basis of such a settlement, leaving it to his majesty's wisdom, at such time and in such manner as his majesty in his parental solicitude for the happiness of his people, shall judge fit, to communicate those propositions to his parliament of Ireland, with whom we shall be at all times ready to concur in all such measures as may be found most conducive to the accomplishment of this great and salutary work. And we trust that after full and mature consideration, such a settlement may be framed and established by the deliberative consent of the parliaments of both kingdoms, as may be conformable to the sentiments, wishes and real interests of his majesty's faithful subjects in Great Britain and Ireland, and may unite them inseparably in the full enjoyment of the blessings of our free and invaluable constitution, in the support of the honour and dignity of his majesty's crown, and in the preservation and advancement of the welfare and prosperity of the whole British empire.

This is the substance of the heads I should propose to accompany the measure—a measure which I think will conduce to the welfare of the British Empire at large. With a view of discussing the subject regularly, I shall now move "That his Majesty's Gracious Message be referred to the consideration of a Committee of the whole House."

After an opposition speech from Sheridan which seemed to command no more attention than does the sound of a pop gun after the roaring of thunder, MR. PITT'S motion was put to vote, and carried, 140 to 15.

UNION WITH IRELAND.

MESSAGE.

Mr. Secretary Dundas brought up a message from his Majesty, of which the following is the substance:

"GEORGE REX.

"His majesty is persuaded that the unremitting industry with which our enemies persevere in their avowed design of effecting the separation of Ireland from this kingdom, cannot fail to engage the particular attention of Parliament; and his majesty recommends it to this house to consider of the most effectual means of counteracting and finally defeating this design, and he trusts that a review of all the circumstances which have recently occurred, (joined to the sentiment of mutual affection and common interest) will dispose the parliament of both kingdoms to provide in the manner which they shall judge most expedient for settling such a complete and final adjustment as may tend to improve and perpetuate a connection essential for their common security, and to augment and consolidate the strength, power and resources of the British empire.

G. R."

LONDON, Jan. 22.

The multiplied acts of aggression which the French Directory has allowed to take place, and even openly carried into execution, against a pretended Ally, would have long ago brought on the prosecution of an open war between France and the United States, were not the Navy of the former annihilated, and that of the latter only in its infancy. The hypocritical affectation of a pacific disposition, at the same time that hostile measures are carried on, affords a striking instance of the perfidy of the Executive Government of France, and is exposed in its true colours in the admirable speech delivered by the President of the United States to both Houses of Congress. The necessity of extending and invigorating the measures of defence on the part of America and of obtaining a full redress of the grievances which have occasioned the rupture between both powers, forms the leading consideration of this speech, which is not less remarkable for the wisdom and vigour of the means it recommends, than for dignity and moderation of language.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 13.

The following production, which has been handed to us for publication, sufficiently speaks in itself, the activity, art and daring of the partizans of the Jacobin candidate for the office of Governor. A remark or two, on some bold assertions contained in it, is prefixed, less with a view to the edification of the six Illuminati, than to demonstrate to those who believe in the necessary purity, and incorruptibility of republican principles, that even those most profoundly skilled in the science of republicanism, may, accidentally, fall now and then, into trivial errors.

"Of the personal merits and personal services" of Thomas M'Kean, we agree with Messrs. Coxe, Dallas, and Co. that it is surely unnecessary and inexpedient to attempt to enter into detail; for the detail of his merits must of necessity be prolix, and to recite his public services, "ab ovo usque ad mala" would be to display a picture, the extreme diversifications of which might tend to disgust, and which might present in the back ground scenes of a too sombrous hue. His independence they appear to have deemed a more profitable topic to enlarge upon, whether justly or not, depends upon a proper understanding of the term. Independence is, indeed, a luminous point in a man's character, if used in reference to his superiority over personal and private motives, in questions of public or of general interest, and a mind unswayed by favor, fear, threat, turbulence or tumult; by the dictum of faction, or the varying breath of popular applause. But this virtue, like many others, in its extension, becomes a vice, unless its possessor holds also an iron sceptre over his passions, a discriminating judgment, and an exemption from at least some of the common frailties of nature. Do we want to see a Governor as well as a Chief Justice "independent" of every restraint but his own turbulent and moody ambition? Do we want to see him "independent" of every honorable motive in his conduct and action through life? Do we want to see him "independent" of the manners, habits, customs, usages, institutions and laws of the country? of public censure and of the united indignation and contempt of mankind? If such, and such only, has been the "independence" of this man, let us seek for other qualities whereon to ground our faith in him.

The insinuation that the friends of government cloak under their zeal for its support, some lurking desire after monarchial forms, is an artifice as stale as it is contemptible; and is resorted to in this case, only as a foil to the doctrine with which it is immediately followed, of rearing up the state governments into a higher and more important influence, and in short into so many distinct sovereignties wholly paramount to the powers of the Federal Government. This is the manner long since selected by the faction of France, in which to conduct their operations against the government of this country. It has long been their masked battery; they now begin to play it off without disguise. Your Constitution is in danger, cry they; your Government too energetic, and tending to tyranny. Against this tyranny let us interpose an insuperable bar in the state Governments. Let us exalt a man who is so capable of extending or overleaping if necessary the limitations of this power, and who, impatient of superiority or controul, must soon from the instinct of his nature, effectually shake it off. But we shall not permit them to succeed in effecting the deadly purposes they entertain: the peace and happiness, liberty, property and life of every honest man, is staked on the issue of this contest, and every honest man feels it.

We, who have so long toiled to lay the foundations of a structure, plain, simple, decent and permanent, are not to be blasted with beholding it crowded full of the vilest rubbish—the inside all empty trash, and its external covered with tinsel rawdry. The pillars already erected, shall be supported; the superstructure shall be raised. Having kept aloof the harpy of Gallic Sanculotism, it is not now to be destroyed, even by the hands of domestic parracides.

The comparison entered into between the two candidates, and the enumeration of M'Kean's exploits, civil and military, is extremely curious, and extremely false. The six Illuminati assert, that Mr. Ross was not in public life until he became Senator. The debates of the Convention of Pennsylvania, which adopted the Constitution, had they sought for full information on the assertion they thus hazardously advance, would have unfolded to them a splendid train of the most active and successful opposition on the part of Mr. Ross, (a member of that body) to the arbitrary, tyrannical, and wholly anti-republican propositions of their grand master.

Friends and Fellow-Citizens.

THE present crisis in the political affairs of the United States demands the attention of every lover of his country; since the exertion of every power which the Constitution reserves to the people, has obviously become indispensable to the preservation of the republican system, to the peace of the nation, and to the harmony of society.

This consideration creating a general solicitude, at the approach of the ensuing election, when the chief executive magistrate of Pennsylvania will be chosen, it has been the object of a number of citizens (public characters collected from Congress and the General Assembly, as well as private characters attending from the several counties of the state) to designate, after a liberal and impartial communication of sentiments, a candidate, whose experienced patriotism, integrity, talents, and fortitude, should render him worthy of your unbiassed suffrages:—And the important selection having fallen, in an honorable manner, upon Thomas M'Kean the present chief justice, we have been appointed as a committee of correspondence, to circulate the intelligence, and to entreat, on your part, a zealous co-operation.

Of the personal merits, and public services of Thomas M'Kean, it is, surely, unnecessary, at this period, to furnish a detail. The abilities and integrity, which he uniformly manifested in every station to which he has been called by his fellow citizens, the learning, vigilance, and independence, which, for more than twenty years, he has displayed as a judge; the sincerity which endears him as a friend: and the benevolence which adorns him as a man; have long been recognized, respected and approved. There is scarcely, likewise, a page of the American revolutionary history, that does not yield some testimony of his active and efficient patriotism. His name stands conspicuous in the list of those illustrious citizens, who first discerned and resisted the parliamentary encroachments of Great Britain, and in the darkest scenes of the contest that ensued, he deserved, and received the unbounded confidence of America. Whether, therefore, as a commander in the militia, as chief justice, as the governor of a sister state, or as a member and president of Congress, his labours, in every vicissitude of the war, were arduous and unremitting: And when the declaration of independence (to which his signature was chearfully affixed) proclaimed a new political era to the world, he became at once a strenuous and faithful supporter of the republican cause. Nor have his exertions ceased with the accomplishment of the revolution. Prompted by principle, education, and habit, as well as by the interests of his family and property, he has always evinced a steady attachment to union, government, and order. Hence his zeal and assiduity as a member of the convention, to promote the adoption of the federal constitution, and in the administration of justice; while, in private life, his mind has been preserved from the taint and corruption of those pecuniary speculations which, rising in rapid succession, have undermined the property, and depreciated the morals of the nation.

From the energies of such a character much may be expected, and much will certainly be required. We aim not to excite discontent, tho we wish to awaken vigilance: nor is it, indeed, the pressure of present grievances, but the ills that threaten, which, principally, require your care and circumspection. An encrease of the public debt and expenditures, a corresponding augmentation of federal taxes and imposts; the dangers of a foreign war; an extensive establishment of land and naval forces, a marked disregard of the national militia, and the introduction of impolitic and irritating laws, are evils which any bad administration may produce, but which a good administration will generally be able to correct. Let the people vigilantly attend to the business of their elections, and they cannot long suffer from injuries of this nature.

Recent events, however, have developed a more awful, and more fatal, source of calamity; and a question has been artfully presented to the public mind, whether the Republican system of our Federal Constitution itself ought in practice, to be preferred to a Monarchy! If we review the conduct of men in power, we shall find, that the honors and emoluments of public office, are only bestowed on the partizans of the administration; and if we attend to the language of those partizans, we shall find, that the constitution of the United States is pronounced to be inefficient, that the authority of the individual states is held in contempt, that the sacred right of universal suffrage is arraigned, and that Republicanism itself is considered as an idle phantom! Is it not, then, a solemn duty to take every constitutional precaution for guarding the palladium of liberty from the violation of secret machinations, or open force? And what precaution can be more effectual, what more decent and orderly, than to give to the state governments the full and legitimate influence of a Republican representation?

Though we have been long accustomed to hear the most insulting epithets applied to the Republican characters of America; and though we anticipate many gross and slanderous attacks upon the reputation of the candidate, submitted through this address to your support; we cannot condescend to engage in an invidious comparison of his qualifications, with those of the gentleman, who will probably be his opponent on the day of election. Suddenly and unexpectedly elevated to the station of a Senator (the only office of permanent importance which he has ever occupied) there has been little opportunity to judge of Mr. Ross's public virtues: but it has been sufficiently demonstrated, that his talents and dispositions are devoted to the advancement of a political system, which, in our opinion, can only be established on the ruins of the Federal Republic.

With these sentiments, and solemnly believing that the freedom and prosperity of ourselves and our posterity are at stake, we offer you all the information and assistance which is in our power to give, on so momentous an occasion; and assure you of our attachment and esteem.

We are faithfully,

Your Friends and Fellow Citizens,

Late from Europe.

We have been favoured with the following Extract of a letter, dated February 2, 1799, from the Continent of Europe, to a gentleman in Philadelphia. The public may rely on its authenticity.

Our vessels sail above the European seas with little or no protection, and great numbers are captured and condemned. Not being in a state of war, our merchants and captains vainly flatter themselves that muster rolls and registers will protect them and notwithstanding the examples before their eyes, the delusion continues: they catch at every silly story, or paragraph in a newspaper and are perpetually cajoled by the delusive promises of French agents.

"The elections in the Southern States afford much consolation for some disgraceful events. I see you are likely to have some trouble with Kentucky and Virginia, which the agents of the directory wish to convert into an American La Vendee. and when their schemes are ripe, to make the medium of their attack on our liberties. In this mode they began with Switzerland exciting rebellion in the Valais, and then marching troops to assist the friends of libetty. Though I do not doubt their designs I do not fear the result. You have wisdom and foresight in the government and a spirit of independence in the people which will frustrate their nefarious schemes.

"The agents of France, finding the love of country is no longer the order of the day in the United States, change their conduct. Preserving their ambition, though cloaked under exterior professions of friendship, they will excite sedition and rebellion under pretence of oppression as in Ireland, and when they have inspired a portion of the people with a hatred of their own government, then they will kindly offer their aid. I hope these views are now well understood in America. There will be no fear ofn a invahon unless the above plan succeeds. Should the discontents spread, without doubt an attack will be made.

"At a late entertainment given at Madrid by the French ambassador, Col. Humphreys was not invited, but classed with the Sardinian and Neapolitan ministers.

"I see by the late French papers that the minister of war complains sadly of desertion—he says that the conscripts march fast enough when called out, but that they desert immediately after. The minister of finance on his side complains of the emptiness of the treasury—more plunder must be sought—they have already ransacked Piedmont—they will probably soon have Naples, and then they will try their hands at Spain and Portugal. In the mean time, my dear sir, let our own country go on in strengthening its army and navy, or our own time will come next."

A Pleasant Retreat.

To be sold at public vendue.

By order of the Orphan's Court of Montgomery County on the 17th day of the fourth month next, at 7 o'clock in the evening, at the Merchants Coffee house, in Philadelphia.

The following described capital house and lots situated in Potts Town, about 36 miles from Philadelphia, being part of the estate of Thomas Mayburry, deceased.

The Mansion house standing on the Main streets, built with stone and the best materials, commodiously divided into rooms and well finished throughout—with an airy entry and good cellars, forty-two feet in front and thirty six feet in depth—adjoining is a Stone Piazza, stove room and kitchen with lodging rooms over them—a well of good water in the yard—and a stone milk house with a smoke house over it—a good garden, &c. on the south end of the lot are a brew house, carriage house and a large stone barn—with extensive stables for horses, cows &c.

This estate would accommodate a large genteel family inclining to retire into the country. Potts Town being one of the cheapest places for provisions within the same distance from Philadelphia—and for healthy situation, conveniences of stages, &c is equal to most inland towns in Pennsylvania

With the foregoing premises will be sold, a Lot of excellent CLOVER LAND, adjoining the Barn, containing about three Acres, in which are a number of Apple Trees.

Further particulars may be known on application to

Rebecca Mayburry, on the premises, John Warder, or James Vaux, in Philadelphia. } Administrators to the estate of Thomas Mayburry, deceased.

JACOB PERKINS,

HAVING invented an effectual check for detecting counterfeit Bank Paper, which has received the sanction of one Bank, and the approbation of the undersigned eminent artists, and having obtained a patent, securing to him, and to his assigns, the exclusive right of the invention, hereby offers to his fellow citizens the privilege of using it upon terms, to be agreed on between him and any person disposed to avail themselves of a guard against counterfeits.

THE undersigned having examined Jacob Perkin's new invented method to detect counterfeit Bank paper, do approve of the plan, it being impossible to engrave or sink two plates perfectly alike, without the original die or hub, the counterfeiter would find it impossible to make an impression which would perfectly gage with the check from the original die.

New Philadelphia.

THE proprietors of the high ground in the neighbourhood of this city, known by the name of Springetsbury Manor; (bounded on the west by the river Schuylkill, on the east by Fourth street, from Schuylkill, on the north by Francis's lane, and on the south by Callowhill street) have agreed to appropriate it for the purpose of building a new city as a summer retreat.

The plan in two sections may be seen at the Coffee house. The main street, 100 feet wide, runs nearly east and west along the top of the ridge, striking Schuylkill a little above the upper ferry, where nature has placed everlasting abbatments, and stone in abundence to form a permanent bridge of one arch, that cannot be approached by ice or floods.

A street of 66 feet wide, is laid out on each side of, and parallel to the Main street. These are crossed by five new streets at right angles, and by the continuation of Front, Second, Third and Fourth-streets from Schuylkill.

The situation is high, airy and healthy, and commands an extensive prospect. The water is good.

The canal runs obliquely through it.

It is just a sufficient distance from the Delaware for a pleasant walk, to give an appetite to dinner after the business of the day is over.

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber this day, at noon, two mulatto house servants, viz Ned, but commonly called Edward among his companions, well known as the subscriber's coachman and waiting man for several years in this city and in New-York—he is a tall strait made mulatto with a large bushy head of hair, about 32 years of age, has a low forehead, with small eyes, a sullen dark look and is much inclined to be abrupt and insolent, one of his legs something smaller than the other from a fracture in his youth; he generally wears a brown cloth coatee with red cuffs and cape and red edging, or Sattian with red cuffs and cape; had on when he went away an old forest cloth surtout, mix'd brown and yellow, and has a box coat of light colored drab, with red and white livery lace, but as I do not know what other clothes he had on, may change his dress.

Nelly, calling herself Wife to the before named Ned, she is much above the middle stature, strait made with falling shoulders, has a remarkable ferocious countenance and is very passionate, quarrelsome, and noisy, she is rather a fair mulatto—has lost one or two of her front teeth, which she supplies with wax, and has a large scar between her shoulders occasioned by a blister; she is about forty five years of age, has a very masculine air in her walk, she carried away with her several gowns of different colored cotton; the above reward will be given for apprehending and securing them in any jail in the United States and giving notice to the subscriber; or fifty dollars for securing either of them.——All persons are cautioned against harboring, entertaining, or concealing the above servants or either of them; and all masters of vessels and others are warned against carrying them from the United States,
